

Collier's magazine for August 25, now on sale at the newsstands, has a handsome spread of color photographs and a fine feature story by Boston Iturbide on the diamond mine at Murfreesboro.

As one who handled the basic copy on this story back in 1925-26, when a Pike county equalization board gave the diamond field owners a bad time and I had a staff man go up there from the El Dorado News, I am in a position to say Collier's has done a good job reworking this old story for nationwide consumption.

It is invaluable publicity for Arkansas, of course. And the hard core of the story is beyond dispute: Those are genuine diamonds at Murfreesboro—and it is the only place they are found on the North American continent.

For years the public outside of Arkansas has been misled by the crystals which Hot Springs marketed from nearby caves, so that scant attention was given the little-known, mysterious blue-earth crater that lies just east of Murfreesboro.

Perhaps a million dollars has been lost trying to mine those diamonds for the commercial market. The late Fred Heiskell, brother of President J. N. Heiskell of the Arkansas Gazette, and co-owner of that newspaper, told me in 1925 the Arkansas Diamond Mining corporation itself sank hundreds of thousands of dollars building a modern mill and trying to operate it profitably. But it failed, presumably with a total loss for the Little Rock investors.

And yet the diamonds are actually there. Collier's photographs this week include one of the $75,000 gem Uncle Sam, which is now on display in a New York jeweler's office.

Arkansas is indebted to Collier's for this fine article and pictorial layout. It certainly won't do our tourist trade any damage.

Encouraging school news reaches us from Howard county. Louis Graves' Nashville News reports that the county's six districts have a good chance to finance a full-nine months term for 1951-52.

In an interview with Cecil Shufeld, county schools supervisor, the News reports:

"Cash reserves in the districts are lower this year than last because of less state revenue than was expected for 1950-51. Still the six districts begin the year with cash funds which they believe will be sufficient to take the schools over until increased millage rates make up an operating deficit."

The News reports that four of the six districts, Nashville, Dierks, Childress, and North Howard have published notices of millage increases; while Mineral Springs and Howard County Training School (at Tollett) have not.

Russell May Rally the Southerners

By JACK BELL.

Washington, Aug. 17 — (AP) — Senator Russell (D-Ga.) said today he isn't a presidential candidate, but there are strong signs he may be the man around whom anti-Truman Southerners rally in 1952.

Gov. Herman Talmadge, one of the sparkplugs of the anti-Truman movement in the south, has said Russell can have Georgia's 28-vote support in next year's convention if he wants it.

"Russell told a reporter all he knows about that is what he read in the papers, adding:

"But I'm not a candidate for President. If that's what it means."

However, some of the Georgia senator's friends said they have little doubt Russell's name will be put before the convention as the choice of the South if President Truman allows his name to be voted upon.

Mr. Truman told a White House news conference yesterday there are plenty of men ambitious for the Democratic nomination if he doesn't run again. But he said it wouldn't be seemly to name them.

The President apparently was not speaking about Russell, who polled 253 convention votes in 1948 in the South's unsuccessful stop-Truman move. This was a little over one-third of the 618 then needed to nominate.

As he did then, Russell represents the South's protest against President Truman's civil rights program. Senator Long (D-La.) said he personally doesn't know a better man for the South to present again.

Although he hasn't said anything about his intentions, the president hasn't discouraged the pilgrimage of the faithful to the White House to pledge support of state delegations for his renomination.

This makes it difficult for any possible candidate even to get favorable son backing and tends to put the nominee in a position to name the nominee if he doesn't run himself.

Meanwhile, Senator McCarthy (R-Wis.) won a demand for time on three radio networks to answer President Truman's Tuesday "hate-monger" charges.

McCarthy, speaking before the Marine Corps league at Lincoln, Neb., said he will be heard over BS from 8:15 to 8:30 p. m. (EST) next Friday, and over NB from 10:45 to 11 p. m. (EST).

He said he had agreed to go on mutual's "reporters' roundup," a Thursday night feature.

Texas Still in Grip of Heat Wave

Dallas, Aug. 17 — (AP) — Texans sweat and grumbled, chops shriveled and water got scarcer today as a vicious heat wave elung tenaciously to the state's broad areas from Panhandle to Gulf.

Twenty-seven persons have died in 100-degree-plus temperatures. Fires have scorched thousands of acres of powder dry timber lands. Cattle are being sold to cause pasture lands have dried up.

There have been walk-outs because of the heat as sweltering employees of telephone companies demand air conditioning.

The thermometer pushed as high as 108 at Texas points yesterday. Some cities have counted 100-plus temperatures for more than three weeks.

Galveston was an envied spot. The city on an island in the Gulf of Mexico had only 92 degrees. The hottest spots were Marshall and College Station.

Bell telephone workers at Fort Worth and Cleburne walked out, complaining of inadequate air conditioning.

Two more deaths were added to the heat prostration toll.

To Air Condition Sanctuary at First Baptist

The new sanctuary of the First Baptist Church is being air conditioned this week. A spokesman of the church said that unless something should occur, the air conditioning system will be in use for the first time on Sunday morning.

This beautiful new church building was completed the first of this year with the dedication service being held the first Sunday of this year. In cold weather the building is heated by a large central heating plant, but until now there has not been any type of cooling in the building.

The refrigerated air system being installed in the basement will utilize the same duct work and blowers that are used in the heating plant, assuring a supply of cool filtered air throughout the auditorium and making it as comfortably cool in the summer as it is warm in the winter months.

The membership of this progressive church had thought it would not be possible to air condition this year, but a few weeks ago a campaign was started among the membership which resulted in enough funds being contributed to make the initial payment and insure installation this summer.

520,000 Men to Be Drafted

Washington, Aug. 17 — (AP) — Selective service experts to induct 520,000 men into the armed services this year and 300,000 in 1952. And it warned certain college men yesterday that they are liable to be drafted during the coming school session.

The induction figures were made public by a house military subcommittee in a report on recent military appropriations hearings.

The warning to students came from Brig. Gen. Louis H. Remfrow, acting director of selective service. In a statement interviewing the new draft law, enflow said:

"Those college students who fail to meet the class standing or test grade criteria for deferment as students and who enroll in colleges can be called out of college for induction if their induction has already been postponed once under statutory provisions."

Lovesick Man Kills Two Women

Lakewood, N. J., Aug. 17 — (AP) — Two women were shot to death last night and a third seriously wounded by a lovesick suitor who later was killed when police cornered him, ocean county Detective George Westervelt said.

Westervelt identified the dead women as Mrs. Anna Tulpan of Hillside, N. J., and her mother, Mrs. Anna Kaczmarek, Mrs. Alexander Primpkoff of Passaic, N. J., said to be visiting the other women, was taken to Paul Kimball hospital where her condition was reported as serious.

The assailant was identified as Pawel Yasiwicz, who police believed was from New York. Almost simultaneously, Westervelt said, Yasiwicz shot himself in the chest and police shot him as he emerged from nearby Woods.

Westervelt gave this account of the tragedy:

"Yasiwicz, believed to be a displaced person from Poland, was violently in love with Mrs. Tulpan, supposedly being her husband for a divorce. Mrs. Tulpan was visiting her mother here."

The suitor, who cornered the grounds for Mrs. Kaczmarek, was at the home tonight where a fight together with the neighbor Primpkoffs was in progress.

Mrs. Kaczmarek objected strenuously to Yasiwicz's attentions to her daughter and an argument ensued.

He became enraged, drew a revolver, and shot Mrs. Tulpan and her mother dead. Mrs. Primpkoff was shot in the neck.

After the shootings, Yasiwicz set fire to the house, in an apparent attempt to destroy evidence. Firemen arriving on the scene discovered the bodies and police threw a cordon around the wooded area.

Yasiwicz soon was stumbling out of the woods brandishing a revolver in front of Lakewood Town's Police Officer William Poon. He shot himself in the chest and at the same moment Poon drew his revolver and shot Yasiwicz.

The shooting occurred on county line road at the north edge of this famous Pine Bell resort in central New Jersey.

Chicago Rape-Slayer Found on a Street Car Reading Bible, Surrenders Meekly

Chicago, Aug. 17 — (AP) — Harry Williams, the husky killer who beat a guard to death and escaped from a death cell in the Cook county jail, was captured on a street car without a struggle last night.

The 20-year-old Negro's capture lacked the dramatic overtones of his escape over the jail wall less than 47 hours before.

Williams, neatly dressed, was riding in a street car reading a Bible when four policemen in a squad car spotted him. Two of the officers, in plain clothes, quietly boarded the car, captured Williams and took him off. Other passengers apparently didn't know what was going on.

Williams surrendered meekly, insisting that police had the wrong man, that his name was "Billy Lilly." He had a driver's license bearing that name. But police fingerprinted him and established his identity. Williams, sullen and smirking by turns, was questioned more than two hours and finally admitted his identity.

Williams, a rapist and slayer, had removed a steel plate from his chest in the death row Tuesday night, just a month to the day before his scheduled execution for murdering a Negro woman in a purse snatching attempt.

The six foot, two inch slayer shined up to the roof of the jail through a ventilating shaft. He lowered himself to the ground with a rope he had made of bed sheets. He climbed into a nearby guard tower on the wall and beat to death guard George Turley, 43. Then he dropped to the ground outside the wall.

More than 1,000 policemen with "shoot to kill" orders sought Williams. Squads chased down many clues. Sheriff John E. Babb personally offered a $1,000 reward for Williams' capture, dead or alive. Police guarded four homes whose occupants they feared he might harm.

A wholesale investigation of alleged "fixity" at the big jail is under way. A guard was fired and a jail official was demoted.

A distant relative by marriage at 11651 Birch st., on the Far South Side, Mrs. Henry saw him through a window and telephone police.

Williams continued ringing until he heard the strains of an approaching police car. Then he fled.

Police Sgt. Vincent Cunningham of the homicide detail and his squad of three officers followed up this report. They figured that the nearest spot where Williams could board a street car was 115th and Morgan sts.

They rushed to 95th and State sts., where all north-bound street cars on that line must stop. They parked and waited. Williams was on the third car that passed the corner.

As the car proceeded northward, Officers Cunningham and Thompson boarded it. Cunningham sat alongside Williams, and DeVitt just behind him. DeVitt covered Williams with his pistol, keeping it covered with him arm so the other passengers wouldn't express alarm.

"You're Harry Williams, aren't you?" Cunningham asked.

"No, I'm Billy Lilly," Williams replied. "If I were Williams I'd be carrying a shotgun, wouldn't I?"

The officers took Williams to police headquarters. His mother, Mrs. Edna K. Marshall, 40, who had come from leveland to urge her son to surrender, rushed up to Williams, said "this is my son," and extended her hand. Williams ignored her.

State's Attorney John S. Boyle, one of the officers who questioned Williams, said the prisoner admitted hearing or reading his mother's record that he seriously considered this request because "I was tired of running around and I got religion — I believe in God."

A pencilled note found in Williams' pocket indicated he planned to flee to Mississippi.

Sheriff Babb said Williams will be held for grand jury action on a charge of murdering the guard. He said Raymond Jenko, 20, white, who also is in the death cell as a convicted murderer, would be charged with being an accessory in the killing. Jenko is accused of aiding Williams in the escape plan.

Williams was convicted of murdering Mrs. Mary Scott Aug. 20, 1950. He also was convicted in ten rapes and five robberies. He shot and wounded two detectives last December when he was seized as a rape suspect.

The EMERALD CRESTED HOPOE

by Gordon MacCreagh

TWO shots came from the house. Alan could see no one in the almost black veranda shadows to shoot back at, but a Fang-due, a few trees away yelled and blazed off. Somewhere farther another of the old carbines Benoit had managed to acquire roared.

A crashing and creaking of bamboo floors indicated that men were rushing indoors to escape being targets as the light improved. A few more shots came.

From beyond the house, at the hut fringe, a hubbub commenced. It presently died down to the compromise between natives. This had been Alan's hope. If white men warred with white men, that was all right, and the miserable pay of the natives bought little loyalty. If natives fought white men, or a white-ish master, so much the better.

Alan's men were coming on now through the coolie lines to fire happily, if blindly. All of them, kept strictly unarmed by the government, handled a gun like some lovely new toy. From within the house rifles spat back. From the sewage creek, hogs squealed and dashed out. The jungle men yelled and fired at them. The hogs scampered on unhurt.

The house fired back. Though light was filtering through the teak holes in long streaks, no men in it were to be seen. Furious voices came with the gun crashes that rattled the bamboo frame.

But targets meant nothing to jungle men who scarcely know how to aim a gun. Their bullets cracked through walls and inner partitions and clear on through. Alan yelled futile warnings to "keep cover, you idiots," realizing that they, even if they heard, neither understood nor cared.

To them this was an authorized hunt, with guns for once in their lives. If anything hit back, that was part of the hunt. The closer they came to their quarry—the whole house—the more chance there was that they might hit something.

IN the creek, some particularly large hog seemed to be scrambling and splashing toward the river. From the house, somebody indignantly cursed and fired at it. Another yelled some sort of enraged alarm and joined the firing.

Alan saw the shots throw murky geysers in the path of the thing's flight. Then he shouted and raced angling for the ditch. This wasn't a hog wallowing away from noise. It was Vroom, escaping with the emerald hoopoe.

Voices in the house yelled and fired a fusillade. A slice of back flew white in front of Alan. He tripped and rolled desperately over and over to the shelter of a bush.

Just as blindly as his men shot at the house, those within fired at the bush. Alan crawled on, flat-bellied as a leopard.

Alan wormed to the edge of the creek, barely an oozy ditch, green-scummed and speckled with sewage, a floatway for logs. He could see the thing some 70 yards down the stagnant stream. The shape plowed and splashed, half swimming, half neck deep wading, scurrying for open water like a hog, a manatee or a hippopotamus. Alan incontinently dived into the sewer.

As Vroom, for it was he, heaved enormously ahead, Alan saw that he carried something wrapped in cloth. A something about two feet long and apparently heavy, for even Vroom's thick arms could not keep it all the time above water as he floundered along. With both arms free, Alan made better speed.

At the creek mouth, dug-out canoes lapped at the bank of the open river like lean crocodiles in the morning sun. Vroom pulled out of the ooze, rushed one of the canoes into the water and drove a paddle, in expertly but with enormous power.

Alan clawed fifth from his shirt front to get at that seven-millimeter shoulder holster. The pistol slid with a greasy, sucking plip, too easily, too greedily, from Alan's fingers into the turgid scum.

Neck deep, he tried blindly to feel for it with his feet. If he did stop on it, he trod it deeper into the muck. He floundered to the river, rolled into a canoe, wishing he might stop to wash off, then he paddled furiously after Vroom. Alan felt like a man chasing an elephant, wondering, if he should catch up with it, what he would do.

As he did catch up, his confusion had settled down. Vroom, while powerful, did not have the hard jungle stamina to keep up his effort. Vroom too, had he a gun, would have lost it in his frantic floundering through the sewer ditch, otherwise he would have surely turned and fired. Clearly he was sacrificing everything for his need to escape with the emerald crested hoopoe.

THIS, then, would be hand to hand, foot to foot, with what- ever fang and claw a man might have. And in that kind of a fight, Vroom had 50 pounds advantage. Alan could credit himself with just one possible asset. In countries like this, where they didn't set so much store by hygiene, not many people could swim very well—not as well as Americans, anyhow.

Alan spied the dirty bundle between Vroom's knees. "Hand it over, Vroom," he called, "and I'll let you go."

Vroom looked over his shoulder and saw no weapon in Alan's hand. "YOU, let ME go?" he panted. He ceased paddling, and slowly grinned like a leopard.

Alan reached his hand to the other gunwale and heaved down on it. The little four-inch freeboard dipped. Water swirled over Vroom's head. Alan watched his precious bundle. Alan threw himself, half straddling Vroom's canoe, and turned it over. Vroom's screech bubbled as both went under.

Urges Use of Handicapped in Plants

Washington, Aug. 17 (AP)—President Truman urged American employers today to put "our four handicapped citizens" to work in defense plants to help "win the struggle for a just and lasting peace."

Mrs. Truman reported that public employment services had found 100,000 more jobs for the handicapped last year than during the year before — a gain of more than 50 per cent.

The President spoke at the National Employ the Physically Handicapped week in the departmental auditorium here.

In presenting a trophy, designed by four handicapped persons, to George Burr, chief employer for "the best performance of the year in behalf of the physically handicapped," Mr. Truman said:

"The young man who has been selected to receive it (the trophy) this year is also a severely handicapped person. He is an employer in Chicago. He is in business for himself. He is successful in that business."

"Today, he employs 80 persons and 60 of them — three fourths of them — are handicapped. x x x But that plant of his, during World War Two, out-produced larger concerns that employed more workers. It did such the work that it received the army and navy 'E' award."

"I am very proud of that young man — George Burr. He has made this country a better place to live in—and he has shown what men can do if they have the courage and the will."

HEAVY LOAD
Long Beach, Calif., Aug. 17 (AP)—It wasn't the biggest accident, but ambulance men swore it was the biggest victim they'd ever seen.

With much huffing and puffing they extricated Guy Cherry, 27, from his car after it jumped a curb and rammed into a store yesterday. Despite minor cuts and bruises, he was given the biggest bed at Seaside hospital.

Nothing else would do Cherry a disk jockey whose home is in Texas. Tiny weighs 640 pounds.

British, Iran to Talk Again in Oil Dispute

Tehran, Iran, Aug. 17 (AP)—British and Iranian leaders plan more informal talks today in the deadlocked oil dispute, as both sides sought to avoid responsibility for another breakdown in the negotiations.

But sources close to U. S. trouble shooter W. Averell Harriman, who has been trying to act as peacemaker in the nationalization row, took a dim view of the situation.

With another full dress bargaining session set for tomorrow, there were no signs that Premier Mohammed Mossadegh's government planned to soften its opposition to a British proposal to solve the squabble which closed the world's biggest refinery at Abadan.

Nor was there any indication the British planned to make any further concessions. They have offered to give up nationalized installations of the British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil company, but would form British companies to market Iranian oil, manage the Abadan refinery and direct oil field work under Iranian supervision.

The Iranians, on the other hand, appear set in their determination to carry out the nationalization law under which British oil workers remaining here would become employees of Iran's own agency — the Iranian National Oil company.

Britain's chief oil negotiator, Richard B. Stokes, who has been making a pound of calls on Mossadegh, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and other leaders, has let it be known that he will leave for London in a few days if no agreement is reached.

DOROTHY DIX

Long-Suffering Wife

Dear Miss Dix: I have been married twenty years and have no children. I am 38, my husband 41. We both work, have a car and nice home, but I am very unhappy. I had in-law troubles through half my married life; now my husband is always hurting my feelings about my family. He drinks heavily and comes home at all hours of the night. He doesn't do anything around the house, won't take me out-in fact does nothing home but eat and sleep. If I threaten to leave him, he puts up a big fight and says he loves me, so I feel sorry for him. I pay my own expenses, buy food and furniture for the house and pay most of the bills. He makes a good salary, and I think the least he can do is have the house fixed up a little. Don't you?

FRIEDA

Answer: It is simply appalling to consider what some women will take from a husband. Years of constant ill treatment then all the wretch has to say "I love you" and the long-suffering wife swoons into his arms.

You're Asking For It
I don't think you want advice, Frieda, as much as you want a shoulder to cry on. You surely know any sane counsel would urge you to continue the life you're leading like a meek lamb. To put everything into a marriage as you have—money, years of hard work, love and fidelity—then receive in return nothing but abuse. You must place a terrific value on the status of "wife" to endure it. If your husband really loves you of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Carnahan.

The Rev. S. A. Whitlow accompanied by Mrs. Whitlow, Dr. G. E. Cannon, and Miss Ona Grant left Wednesday morning for Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Luck returned last night from Temple, Texas.

Miss Elsie Weisenberger has returned from the George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., where she served as vice president of the Library Club.

Mrs. A. C. Davis and grandson, Billy Leon Davis have returned from a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Martindale and other relatives in Ft. Worth, Texas. They were accompanied home by Miss Jerry Roberts who will remain for a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Williams arrived Thursday to attend the funeral of Mr. Williams's mother, Mrs. E. P. Williams, and will remain for a few days visit. Mrs. W. F. Williams will be remembered as Miss Pansy Smith.

Mrs. A. P. Cagle who has been visiting her brother, Mr. W. P. Singleton and Mrs. Singleton, returned to her home in Owensboro, Kentucky, Wednesday. She was accompanied home by her mother, as he claims, you might bring him to his senses by a temporary absence. To reform him after twenty years seems well-nigh hopeless but if you withdraw your financial support for a while he might come to appreciate you.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a girl of 21 with a six-months-old baby. The father of the child, who denies him, says he loves me and wants to marry me but he insists that the baby be left with him. I know I can never be happy without the baby or my boy friend. Do you think he loves me when he would ask me to do such a thing?

Answer: You are certainly in a complicated muddle, and I think you should seek expert personal advice in trying to solve your problem. Go to your clergyman or a local social welfare agency (which may be located through your telephone book), and let them help you.

Your boy friend's love is shown in a very strange way when he can disclaim his own child and ask you to surrender it. He might be induced to change his mind if you have him, too, talk with the proper person.

Dear Miss Dix: I am a second-year college student, with a problem. I am in love with a red-headed boy who does not like me to wear red. I have dark hair and wear red very often. Since I am in college I cannot afford to change my wardrobe. He is quite upset and gets angry whenever I have on something red. What should I do?

WINIFRED

Answer: Some people have such an antipathy to a certain color that they become actually ill when confronted with it. Your boy friend's antipathy to red may be as serious a thing, or it may just be a whim. You must judge its relative importance and act accordingly. He probably is sincere in his dislike of red, and if so you had better wear it as little as possible.

Dear Miss Dix: I am 12 years old and unhappy because some of my girl friends use pink lipstick and my mother doesn't want me to. Is she right or wrong?

ANABELLE

Answer: Like most mothers, yours is absolutely right in this regard. Twelve is too young for even the lightest of pink lipsticks. Your own youthful coloring is your adornment at your age. Lipstick is a camouflage, and the charm of a young girl has nothing to hide.

Essential Waterways to Be Maintained

New Orleans, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Only inland waterways that the U. S. Corps of Engineers deems essential will be maintained this year, says a Corps official.

Col. W. D. Milne told a meeting of inland waterways operators here yesterday that the engineers can not maintain all waterway facilities.

Milne, deputy chief of civil works for rivers and harbors, said, "some of the smaller waterways will be overlooked this year because there is no money available to maintain them."

Sunday School LESSON

By WILLIAM E. Gilroy, D. D.
Think God for what? Think God reader, that you live in a democracy in which you are free to breathe, and think, and speak, and act, in a State which is pledged to accord you these liberties and protect them.

In too many countries today, and they are not all under Communist domination, no such liberties for the individual exist. One of the world's best and greatest newspapers has been suppressed in Argentina, and Protestants in Spain have been subject to oppressive restrictions. And across the world many Protestant and Roman Catholic leaders are suffering grave persecution.

No such situation, thank God, exists in the democracies in which we live. When the doorbell rings we may go to the door with no fear that a totalitarian agent has come to invade our home, or to carry us off to a concentration camp.

If we are living within the law, and morally correct lives, we can meet the day and the night with freedom from fear. It is not easy for us to comprehend that great numbers of our fellowmen in many parts of the world are living each day in the grip of fear and danger.

The fact that in some of these lands it was not always so, and the story of how liberties were suppressed, ought to make us zealous to see that no such subversion of liberty ever occurs in our land. We may conclude all too readily that "it cannot happen here."

All this emphasizes very strongly the question of the relation of the individual to the State, the rights and duties of citizens, and the nature of the government that they maintain, or allow to be in power.

It is obvious that under present world conditions great inequalities and great restrictions exist in relation to freedom, that under more normal conditions, such as existed a generation or two ago would have been regarded as serious and unjustifiable invasions of personal freedom.

If you are a young man, of the right age, you may be drafted for military service in some far-off land. If you would have gone in any case, you might be said to be free, but not if you went because the State compelled you to go. There is a matter of glaring, even if justifiable and unavoidable, inequality. It is justifiable and unavoidable on the ground that otherwise there might soon be no freedom for you or anybody else.

If you are a business man you are subject to limitations, restrictions and regulations, which a few years ago would have been regarded as an unwarranted invasion of your private affairs; and if you are high salaried, or wealthy, the State takes a major portion of your income, in what would certainly fifty years ago have been regarded as sheer confiscation.

In the midst of the charges and counter-charges, warnings and counter-warnings, propaganda and counter-propaganda, of which our days are so rife, what have Christian leaders to say? What have they said? I propose to discuss this in my next comment.

Meanwhile, let us measure and treasure the liberties that we possess, and while we pray for others, thank God for what we have.

"SON of Man, whenever I doubt of life I think of Thee." So wrote George Matheson in his blindness. Whenever you and I doubt either God or man, we should do well to think of Jesus. His Cross is a symbol both of what God is and what we may become. The proud Roman at the foot of the cross was compelled to say, "This man was a Son of God."

JESUS was supremely a man of faith... knowing what was in both man and God he had great faith in both. We have faith in God largely because we must have Him; we are not sufficient unto ourselves. Faith can overcome the most miserable circumstances... overcome despair.

LIFE becomes a radiant thing for people of faith, since they are deeper in to the secrets of life. The universe opens its heart to eyes of faith; closed doors swing ajar when faithful steps approach; loving spirits smile their welcome to trustworthy souls; latent powers blossom in the presence of fidelity; young children and wise old age give themselves with abandon to those who offer them confidence; God waits to shower His blessings on men who can be trusted. Of the Pilgrims of yesterday, guided by the Divine, it was said, "They were MEN OF FAITH AND VERY SURE OF GOD."
